BOOM IN STOCKS INCREASES
FOURFOLD IN SIX DAYS WITH PROCEEDS TOTALING $377,686

With the price of raw sugar in New York going from 4.25c to 6.53c, the former figure having been an advance from 3.26c on July 31, it is not surprising that the boom on the stock exchange for the past six days has amounted to four times that of the previous corresponding period. Prices have also gained correspondingly, the banner-bearer being Waialua with an advance of 40 points. In proceeds of sales Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co. leads with $86,537, Olaa coming next with $59,123 and first in number of shares sold—13,480.

Of sixteen stocks changing hands three were non-sugar, one of which being alone in marking a decline. Every other stock made an advance, several of them very substantial gains. Altogether 30,721 shares were sold, with proceeds of $374,446.87 1/2, as compared with 10,662 shares of 14 stocks in the six days ending Friday of last week with proceeds of $94,262.12 1/2. With realizations of $3,240 from bonds this week, against none last week, the business amounts to $377,686.87 1/2 or an increase of $285,944.75. Details are given herewith, with changes of prices as compared with last sale quotations of one week from yesterday.

Ewa Plantation Co., 882 shares for $21,215.25; high 25.50, low 20.25, gain 5 1/2.
Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co., 2,650 shares for $86,537.50; high 33.75, low 29.50, gain 4 1/2.

COMMERCIAL NOTES
The Methodists are building a frame dormitory on Punchbowl street to cost $3500.

A $6000 rooming house to be constructed in the hands of Emory & Webb, architects.

Cotton, Neill & Co. are installing pre-evaporating systems in Puunene, Pahala and Aiea sugar mills.

Alexander & Baldwin have taken the agency of the Koolau Agricultural Co., together with that of the Koolau railway.

Conditions in specifications for the refrigerating plant at the Pearl Harbor naval station, practically shut out local contractors.

At the first of this week 8290 feet of the main bore of the Waialeale tunnel had been completed, leaving 6153 feet yet to be driven.

Trains are being operated over the new spur of the Oahu railway, extending four miles into the pineapple fields from the Wahiawa branch.

Bids will be opened in the public works office on August 29 for $40,000 to $50,000 worth of work on the streets of Auwailu, or the Punchbowl hill district.

Buildings destroyed by fire at the Outrigger Club recently are to be replaced with larger and more elaborate structures, Emory & Webb having the plans in hand.

Plantation laborers will not be without their share of the big profits from sugar sold under the great rise in prices. The improvement in the market automatically brings into force the agreement between them and the planters whereby they receive a bonus in wages on all sugar marketed for over $70 a ton.

Officers of the Honolulu Stock and Bond Exchange elected at the annual meeting this week are A. J. Campbell, president; E. G. Dolsberg, vice-president; H. Cushman Carter, secretary; Bishop Trust Co., treasurer.

From August 1, 1912, to July 31, 1914, inclusive, 57,357 shares of sugar stocks with proceeds of $509,370.00, and 15,914 shares of miscellaneous stocks with proceeds of $442,563.98, making totals of 73,271 shares and $951,934.02, were sold through the exchange, together with bonds of the

BIG ATTRACTION
TO HILOITES

[Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence.]
HILO, August 14.—More than $3000 worth of gasoline and a scow valued at about $1000 went up in smoke last Tuesday evening when a fire broke out on a lighter laden with auto fuel, which had just been discharged from the steamer Enterprise. The scow and its contents burned until 2 o'clock in the morning and then the charred remains of the punt went to the bottom some three miles out at sea.

It was 10 o'clock on Tuesday night when the fire alarm was sent in from the Matson warehouse at Waialae. Instantly about everyone in Hilo turned out and by means of automobiles, hacks and rigs, rushed to Waialae. The first rumor was that the Matson warehouses were on fire. This story was soon killed when it was seen that a scow was drifting down the river. Flames hundreds of feet in height were roaring from the scow and the sound of bursting drums of gasoline terrified those in the immediate vicinity. The line that had moored the scow to the shore had been cast off in order to allow the dangerous load of fire to drift with the stream out into the bay. This action undoubtedly saved another scow and the warehouse from destruction.

The burning mass floated down the stream under the two bridges and then swung around with the tide till the scow was almost beached. Then the current again took charge and the scow, still with flames mountain high issuing from her, drifted along until it looked as if the railroad wharf and the lumber schooner Camano, alongside of it, were sure to be destroyed. Sampans, boats and launches kept circling around the scow, but the intense heat and the frequent explosions made it a dangerous proposition to get close enough to make a towline fast. One attempt was made and although the launch got to within a short distance of the scow, the intense heat and the darting flames made it impossible to get a line on board.

Just as the launch made the first attempt and failed, a terrific explosion took place and gas and flames shot out 100 feet horizontally from the scow, by good fortune the men in the launch had just passed the danger point and thus escaped certain death.

Undismayed by their narrow escape, James Reid and a Hawaiian, William Hoi, made another attempt to put a line on the scow. It was ticklish work and, for a time, the job seemed to be an impossible one. However, Reid and Hoi stuck to their task in plucky fashion and, finally, managed to, in cowboy fashion, throw a loop over one of the corner posts of the scow. Then began the exciting tow out to sea.

The little launch towed her blazing and exploding charge straight out and when the tow line burned through, some miles out, finally abandoned the task.

When the launch lost her connection with the scow the latter still drifted on and at times the flames were just as fierce as when the fire first started. Away on the horizon the shooting masses of gas and flames played on the water and the spectacle was a striking one.

At 2 o'clock in the morning the end came when the flames had burned the sides of the scow and the water came in. The lighter sank, but the gasoline at once spread over the surface of the water for an area of at least an acre. The fire blazed on the top of the water for a few minutes and then all was dark.

Most of the gasoline on the scow was consigned to the Volcano Stables Company and was covered by insurance.

The Hilo fire department turned out as soon as the alarm was turned in. The engine raced down to Waialae and, as the first impression was that the fire was at the Matson warehouse, a line of hose was coupled up with a hydrant which was at least 1000 feet away. It was then seen that the hose was not long enough, so Fire Chief Johnson ordered the engine back to town for more hose. The chief returned at Waialae to take charge of the fire. Soon after the auto departed for the extra hose Johnson discovered that the fire was on the scow. He at once tried to get into telephone communication with the fire station. He had to go some distance before he could reach a phone, and then could not raise the station.

The fire truck in the meantime had attached a reel as a tow and started to speed down to the fire. Just at the postoffice corner the left wheel of the reel collapsed and the apparatus was wrecked. The truck then raced down to the railroad wharf, where it was stationed in order to fight the flames should the burning scow touch the wharf.

The origin of the fire is thought to have been a cigarette butt that was dropped from the Waialae bridge on to the scow.
